PREFACE

Nikhil Banga Nagarik Sangha (NBNS) is a Kolkata based human rights group for protection of Minority rights in Bangladesh. This group is committed to uphold basic human rights of people and has been working as a Human Rights Group ever from its formal inception on November 23, 1977. The organization has been working on to establish human rights of minority people persecuted and evicted from modern day Bangladesh. It has been perceived, in the said territory, owing to failure of governance, human rights of minorities in the last 7 decades have turned into the greatest casualty.

The religious fanatic forces in contemporary Bangladesh are growing at an alarming pace. The inhuman oppression against the minority community based on Jihadi philosophy has not only hurt the religious sentiments of the community but also raised a serious question mark on their existence in the so called “Sonar Bangla”. Since the rise of Islamist political formations more explicitly in Bangladesh during the 1990s the minority community has been intimidated or attacked and substantial number of them have been migrating to India.

In the late 1980s minority community was almost evenly distributed in all the regions, with concentrations in Chittagong, Khulna, Jessore, Dinajpur, Faridpur and Barisal. In 1941 the Hindus alone formed about 28% of the population, which declined to 22.05% in 1951, as the rich and upper caste Hindus migrated to India after 1947. Since then, the minority population had dropped because of mass exodus & genocide during the 1971 carnage by then “Pakistani Army” which led to one of the largest displacements of population based on ethnic and religious identity in the recent history.

In the first Constitution of the newly independent Bangladesh, secularism and equality of all citizens irrespective of religious identity was enshrined. But with almost 8 million displaced Hindus and more than 200,000 victims of genocide during the liberation war, the minority community failed to gain faith in the Muslim community which gradually resulted in growing bitterness. Subsequently President Zia-ur-Rahman abandoned the constitutional provision for secularism and began to introduce Islamic symbolism in all spheres of national life. Zia brought back the multi-party system thus allowing organizations such as Jamaat-e-Islami Bangladesh to regroup and contest elections. In 1988 President Hussein Mohammed Ershad declared Islam to be the State Religion of Bangladesh. Though the move was protested by students, left-leaning political parties and minority groups, neither the regimes of the BNP nor Awami League had challenged the transformation and hence, it remains in place till date.

In 1990, the Ershad regime was widely blamed for negligence in the riots following the Babri Masjid fiasco in India, the largest communal disturbances since independence of Bangladesh. Minority community was attacked in 1992 by the Islamic fundamentalists in Bangladesh. More than 200 temples were destroyed; families were attacked, women were raped and more than hundreds were killed. Again after the general elections in 2001, when a right-wing coalition including two Islamist parties (JeI and IOJ) led by the pro-Islamic right wing Bangladesh Nationalist Party (BNP) came to power, the minority community and liberal secularist Muslims were attacked by a section of the governing regime. Members of minority community, thousands in numbers, were believed to have fled to neighbouring India to evade religious persecutions and inhuman oppression by the fundamentalist forces.

On February 28, 2013, the International Crimes Tribunal sentenced Delwar Hossain Sayeedi, the Vice President of the Jamaat-e-Islami, to death for the war crimes committed during the War for Liberation of Bangladesh. Following the sentence, activists of Jamaat-e-Islami, its student wing; Islami Chhatra Shibir and other followers of Jamaat attacked the minority community in different parts of the country. Properties were looted, houses were burnt into ashes and temples were desecrated and set on fire. The minority leaders protested the attacks and appealed for justice. The Supreme Court of Bangladesh then directed the law enforcement agencies to start suo motu investigation into the attacks. The International community including US Ambassador to Bangladesh expressed their concern on the attacks by the Jamaat on the minority community.

This booklet is thus a tribute to all those victims of genocide who lost their near & dear ones, houses, land & property etc for the past one year. This is an attempt to invite the attention of the International community towards the ongoing butchery against the minority community in Bangladesh. Is Bangladesh in the making of another Taliban entity? One can only imagine how nationalistic, linguistic and clannish a section of fanatics in Bangladesh is. They want the whole world to feel sorry for them for what happened in 1971. But what are they doing now? Aren't they doing the same to the minority community nowadays? The horrible truth that they decimated the minority community in Bangladesh after the 1971 war is a manifestation of the dual policies in Bangladesh by Pakistani junta. The Law of the jungle still prevails there. The civil society in Bangladesh should rise above their political lineages to respect the rights of minority community. They should be respected for what and who they are and not judged on the basis of caste, creed and religion. Fundamentalist forces like Jamaat and other like-minded groups should be alienated from the main political stream. It is high time that the ruling and opposition parties should work in tandem and take the onus on themselves to curb fundamentalist forces with Jihadi ideologies for sustenance of a healthy democracy in Bangladesh.

“Bangladesh contains 9% of minority population but they must not enjoy the right to vote. When Muslims are majority in the country there is no need of listening to the minority people. Why should their opinions be listened as well? They must not be given the full right of citizenship,” as stated by Allama Safi, leader of Bangladesh Hefajat Islam.

Jamaat Hefazat's posters to banish Hindus en masse in Satkhira

Lots of hand-written posters with ominous languages at Hindus – all Hindus will be expelled from Bangladesh, all Shahid Minars across the country will be smashed, incidents of Fatehpur and Chakdaha in Kaligunj will be repeated if necessary – have been posted in Satkhira of Kaligunj on behalf of Jamaat and Hefazat. Apart from walls of schools, posters are seen on walls of residences leading to a terror among members of minority community in the vicinity. Police officials of Kaligunj police station have seized 6 posters and stated that an intense search for culprits is in full swing.

According to Ajay Kumar Mandal, head teacher of Bishnupur Prankrishna Smarak Bohumukhi Uccha Vidyalaya, a few members of the school management committee including Samir Kumar Mandal perceived these posters on Tuesday in the school's walls during morning walk. The posters stated that observance of Victory Day, Martyrs' Day and Independence Day of Bangladesh would no more be allowed. All Shahid Minars would also be destructed and women would no longer be allowed to work in offices. The posters also warned people from observing Baisakhi Fair. People were reprimanded that decisions of war tribunals would not be accepted; any enactment of Delwar Hussein Saydee's death sentence would create havoc. Failure to accept 13 demands of Hefazat would ruin all.

Ali Azam Khan, senior police officer of Kaligunj police station, stated police would leave no stone unturned to book the felons.

Majority mindset to procure everything

Abul Momen

Even if Hindu persecution has been a regular feature in the realm of Bangladesh ever since 1971 as a sequel to anti-Hindu riots in erstwhile East Pakistan, the recent development in both Baghaichari and Khagrachari raises question of the stance and also obligation of majority Muslim community to the minority Hindu community there. Pakistan was based on two-nation theory and owing to its foundation in a highly partisan and frenzied philosophy, it has failed to have support of the minority community thus far.

Mutual distrust and hatred among Hindus and Muslims, after sharing courtyards for almost ten centuries, got all-time high in the year 1946 and both riots of Kolkata and Noakhali intensified this new (then) saga only. Generally, mutual trust and opinion had been more in rural than urban Bengal but the Noakhali episode despoiled it largely. Due to the partition, 11 lakhs of Hindus left East Pakistan in 1947. The majority of them were persecuted, terrified Hindu refugees albeit three-and-half lakh were rural middle class people, two lakhs of them were well-heeled peasants and workers. During partition, 29 percent of the entire population in then East Bengal (now Bangladesh) comprised minority people but it was found to be 25% during the census in 1951. If the following censuses are analyzed minutely, a steady reduction in minority populace will be witnessed and this declination has led to the present situation – minority population in Bangladesh now amounts to 12 %. Earnest researches can discern that millions of minority people have left the country in the last 60 years. Unfortunately, this trend is yet to end; neither the State nor the society is serious to call it a halt.

A novel notion has come to the fore these days and it is to evaluate riotous situation in Bangladesh with regard to numbers and extent of Hindu-Muslim riots in India. Since India is not a communal country and its jurisprudence has constitutional obligation to retain the Right to Equality, Muslim and other minority groups have opportunities to vie with these catastrophes. Studies proclaim albeit there have been hundreds of Hindu-Muslim riots in the last 60 years in the realm of India, those have not led to expulsion of minority groups – riots in '47, '50 and '64 happen to be exceptions. This can be assessed better if flights from and entrances to Bangladesh are studied. A close eye on societal evolutions in Bangladesh can posit the stronger trend among the two.

Pakistan was not formed on a two-nation theory only; measures adopted by its successive governments proved to be potent enough to smash minority morale. Nehru-Liaquat Pact signed in 1950 pledged to render Right to Equality to minority population in both countries but it was never abided by Pakistani governments. On the contrary, repressive measures were adopted to expel Hindus from Pakistan. Let's concentrate on a few examples. Two legislations were passed in the Constituent Assembly of Pakistan in 1951 that virtually imperiled properties of minority community in the whole nation. These are – East Bengal Evacuee Property (Restoration of Possession) Act of 1951 and East Bengal Evacuees (Administration of Immovable Property) Act of 1951.

It must be mentioned, Hindu society, thanks to its cordial relation to the British Empire, overshadowed Muslims in almost every aspect. Hindus, naturally, owned more properties than Muslims. The situation in eastern part of Bengal was no different. Partition and execution of abovementioned statute laws simply scourged Hindus and a section of Muslims pounced down on these preys. A new trend to seize Hindu properties by sheer intimidation or force came to the fore.

One facet has got to be cleared now. This phenomenon and its burgeoning influence in Bangladesh has become a cause of concern to me for years. Without a shred of doubt, this menacing concept has become ingrained in Bangladeshi society by now leading to pernicious impacts only and unless this is uprooted, any development or progress in our society will remain a dream only.

Hindus, by the active support of State on the whole, have been reduced to second-grade citizens in Bangladesh. Two more legislations were also passed and enacted later to crush Hindu morale utterly and there was indeed a great success in these regard. These two laws are – East Bengal Prevention of Transfer of Property and Removable Documents and Records of 1951; East Pakistan Disturbed Person (Rehabilitation) Ordinance of 1954. As a result, minority Hindus lost their right to sell off properties independently and governmental permission to do the same became indispensable. With the support of Pakistan (Administration of Evacuee Property) Act XII of 1957 and 1959, military ruler Ayub Khan declared election of six distinguished leaders of minority community as unlawful. (EBDO) Hindus realized once more how the whole of Pakistan was vindictive to them. The venomous and prolonged Enemy Property Act was enacted in Pakistan against Hindus as fallout of temporary war between India and Pakistan in 1965. This single act has been active yet and if truth be told, its sinister effect has razed Hindus to the ground. Following the war in 1964 and enactment of this law, migration of Hindus became all-time high. During the Muktiyuddha, Hindus were termed as the sole enemy by the Pakistani government, Pakistani army and its accomplices then. No less than 70 lakhs of Hindus took refuge in India, as a result.

It must also be mentioned, whatever the obstacles and premeditated persecutions were, Hindus were connected to mainstream politics and society in the Pakistani regime. They also had the earnest desire to live in Bangladesh without fear and any sort of terrorism. But now they have become despondent of their future. Not Bangladesh has failed to protect them only, status of Hindus remains unchanged here yet – they are still second-graded citizens like the Pakistani regime. Well, I am ready to term the desecration of holy Hindu deities (just after impendence) as a maneuver by pro-Pakistanis to harass the then newly founded and independent government. But what did the State do? Following 1975, Bangladesh was transformed into another edition of Pakistan; not secularism was erased from the constitution or state religion bill was passed only but Vested Property Act was turned into a more brutal form also. Hindus were persecuted once more following the destruction of Babri Masjid in 1989 and fall of Ershad regime in 1990.

OUTCRY : DON'T KILL ME AS I WORSHIP IDOLS 9

Now, whenever partition and following decades are analyzed it gets apparent – neither Pakistan nor Bangladesh has procured minority communities or kept partisanship at bay. Simultaneously, anxieties rise extremely when attempts to seize Hindu properties become genetic.

There is a specific reason behind penning aforesaid anecdotes – the majority community retains a strong indisposition of rising atrocities against the minority community; it has never tried to find out why are minority people being victimized unreasonably leading to their migration and how each such loss makes Bangladesh wretched. How can a country develop if a definite section of its populace remains in constant fright and continues to have bruises of partition? Is this possible at all? We have begun to pay prices for this disinclination; politics in Bangladesh has become a mere profession and the best tool to acquire properties of others. And thanks to this steady deterioration, criminalism has got the potency.

To better the country, new concepts have to be implemented – it is to create Right to Equality throughout the country; a law that will treat every citizen equally. Poor Muslims have also become victims to reprisals in Baghaichari. Now it's the time to resolve mounting hostility based on Parbattya Chattagram Agreement instead of inciting these hapless Muslims. But before that the sordid account of minority persecution and rising criminalism among a section of majority community has to be discerned.

We have to accept mistakes and rectify those.

Minority people are diminishing in Bangladesh

Sheikh Sabiha Alam

The number of minority people in Bangladesh is declining fast and as per the 11 census, the number of Hindus has decreased by 24%. Officials of Bangladesh Bureau of Statistics stated (on condition of anonymity), the number of Hindus may decline more in the next census. If facts of census are analyzed, in 1901 Hindus comprised 33% of the entire population in the territory shaping contemporary Bangladesh. The first census of independent Bangladesh in 1971 revealed that Hindus represented 13% of the entire populace and by 2001 it came down to 9.3%. However, at the same time, there has not been significant reduction of Buddhists, Christians and other religious minority groups. On the other hand, the number of Muslims has increased exponentially.

Studies of BBS officials bring some more precarious factors to light. Since the rate of birth among Hindus is less while their rate of immigration is quite high, Hindu population in Bangladesh is shrinking. However, a few officials of NIPORT or National Institute of Population Research and Training have doubted the authenticity of the theory – a community is on the wane due to its less rate of birth. They do confirm that Hindu population in Bangladesh is decreasing because of the high rate of immigration among them. This factor is influenced by a handful of factors including economic and social disparity and potential to have better social life abroad. Apart from this, inconceivable anti-Hindu violence in 2001 following election compelled Hindus in their thousands to immigrate. Officials feel all these factors will affect the next census in 2011

BBS states, districts in Bangladesh enjoying strong presence of Hindus include Gopalganj, Maulavibazar, Thakurgaon, Khulna, Dinajpur and Bagerhat. Now save for Narail, all districts are witnessing sharp decline. While in 1991 Hindu population at Narail was 25.5%, it increased to 31.49 percent in 2001. According to new researches of BBS, minority households are smaller compared with Muslim households. Census of 1991 brings forth a heartrending account – membership of any minority family is 4.9 while it is 5.6 in a Muslim family. In 1901, Muslims comprised 66.1% of the population in the territory shaping present-day Bangladesh. While in the formative years of Bangladesh it was 85%, it increased to 89.6% as stated by the census of 2001. There was high flow of Muslims into East Pakistan owing to partition during 1941-47 and rock-steady facts do state that the rate of birth has always been higher among Muslims. Buddhists, among other minority groups, formed 6% of the entire population till 1974 and it remained same during the census of 2001. Christians also formed 3% and this remains unchanged yet.

While talking of this to MKM Narunnabi, Chairman of Population Science Department in Dhaka, he said to Prothom Alo, there has only been a handful of a research as regards changes in population of different religious communities in Bangladesh. Nevertheless, less rate of birth diminishes population of the same community. But this is not the end as Ahmed Al Sabir, Director of NIPORT and also well-known researcher, disagrees to this standpoint. On the word of him, without a shred of doubt, rate of birth among Hindus is less and they are witnessed to participate in family planning programs more. But all these do not mean that the number of minority people will continue to diminish. If one family comprises 8 members, 1 child to each of them will multiply 16 people. Lack of rate of birth does not mean that the population will diminish in Bangladesh – known for its excessive population already.

Stating that has never been religion-based investigation, he said, reduction in population due to higher rate of immigration appears to be more suitable. There is no definite fact of the number of Hindu immigrants from Bangladesh after its independence and of also why they left. A few researchers work on this in private measures; Abul Barkat, noted economist, happens to be one of them. As per his statement, Hindus owned 45% lands during the independence of Bangladesh. Lots of these landed properties have been appropriated through Vested Property Act leading to the rise in immigration of Hindus.

Mohammed Rafi, researcher of department of researches and assessment of BRUNK – private development organization, said to Prothom Alo, as per his researches, escalating persecutions have made Hindus leave Bangladesh. Besides, rising concerns of the future of students between Class VIII to XII has compelled Hindu families to migrate. This migration, at the moment, is not limited to India only but other countries like United States also. Muslims from Bangladesh are also moving to these countries seeking employment opportunities. But the government has not adopted any measure to halt the immigration of Hindus.

Rafi has shown in one of his research documents that between October, 2011 (month of election) and February, 2002, Hindus were prevented to abide by their religious beliefs in no less than 120 sub-districts. They became victims of extortion in 190 sub-districts; they were forced to migrate from Bangladesh in 137 sub-districts. While in 128 sub-districts Hindus' properties were plundered, properties were destroyed in 162 sub-districts and Hindus became to physical assaults in 202 sub-districts. Since Hindus migrate without lodging protests, they become easy preys to Islamists and are also threatened by radical Muslims of seizure of their properties. The government instead of adopting sufficient measures to stop this harassment maintains reluctance.

Asim Kumar Dey, chief of census department of BSS, states, even if population of Hindus is decreasing by percentage, it remains intact with regard to numbers. The difference between members of Hindu and Muslim families is widening and reasons of migration is recognized officially. Nevertheless, no research of how many people are deserting Bangladesh is yet to take place. This will be done in future.

Noteworthy influence of Religion on Politics in Bangladesh

Diplomatic article; Correspondent from New York

Religion plays a major role in the political arena of Bangladesh and the indigenous government there is also sensitive to the religious consciousness of the majority of its people. And all these have been said in the report on global religious freedom published from Ministry of External Affairs, United States of America, on November 17, 2010. The report states clearly, even if the government supports religious freedom overtly, minority persecution happens to be a big threat to the country. However, the report praised several approaches of the Bangladeshi government to ensure religious freedom and rights of religious minority groups in the country. Hilary Clinton, Minister of External Affairs of the United States of America, published this report based on researches on 198 countries across the globe between July 1, 2009 and June 30, 2010.

The report also states, there was no change in the government's position as regards religious freedom while making the study. A few decisions of the High Court of Bangladesh have played major roles to strengthen the saga of secularism in the country. Representatives of religious minority groups are available in the highest form of governance. The government has also made significant approaches to reform Madrasa education system. Nevertheless, persecutions on Hindus, Christians, Buddhists and Ahmediyas are in full swing. Well, this number has reduced if compared to the past.

The report also states a few incidents of torture on tribal and Christian communities and in this regard, reports of a few Bengali and English dailies have been made use of. Persecutions on Ahmedia community have also been mentioned. In the report following the respect shown to the existence of religious freedom, a paragraph has been contributed to deal with the position of the government in this regard; the paragraph states how the fifth reform of the constitution was invalidated by a decision of the High Court in the present year. The decision proved victorious to restore secularism and banning religious groups. But government officials consider that it is yet to implement the prohibition completely. High Court did also annul fatwas, it has also been included. A woman affairs organization named "Mahila Parishad" has informed of 33 fatwas proclaimed at the time when the report was being made from 2009 at a stretch.

As regards prohibitions on religious freedom it is said clearly, constitution acknowledges right of all religions to propagate, maintain and conduct their own methods of worships. No report of special checking against any particular missionary has been found. No financial penalty has been imposed based on religious standpoints. Sheikh Hasina's cabinet contain 4 minority ministers. The report also includes vested property act, apart from mentioning conflicts between Bengalis and inhabitants of Parbatta Chattagram. The report contemplates fights in the sub-district of Baghachari, under the district of Chittagong on last February 19. On the word of embassy of Bangladesh in Washington, US Ministry of External Affairs has lauded performances of the present Government of Bangladesh.

Source: Bangladesh Bureau of Statistics

If district-wise facts of census of 2001 and 2011 are placed alongside, it states openly that the population of Hindus has decreased in 15 districts. According to officials of BBS, no facts confirm that these people have moved to other districts. Hence, officials state, this is a “missing population.” Populace of Hindus has not increased in any district of Barisal division. As per the census of 2001, Hindu population in six districts of the division viz. Barisal, Bhola, Jhalkathi, Pirozepur, Patuakhali and Baraguna was 8,16,0051. It has come down to 7, 62,479, as per census in 2011. Population of Hindus has also diminished in the three districts of Khulna division including Bagerhat, Khulna and Satkhira. The condition of districts of Narail and Kushtia in the division remains the same. Districts of Gopalgunj, Madaripur and Kishoregunj in the Dhaka division have also seen a steady reduction. On the other hand, Pabna district in Rajshahi division suffer the same cruel truth. If two censuses of pre-independence era and five censuses afterwards are contemplated, it’s evident that both population and percentage of Hindus in comparison to the general population has declined. However, both population and percentage of Muslims have increased. The condition of other religious minority groups including Buddhists and Christians remains same, somehow. Pankaj Bhattacharya, veteran politician and also convener of Gana Oikya Committee said to Prothom Alo, that the sole factor behind this catastrophe remains the lack of communal harmony as a result of mounting communal atmosphere. Communal disturbances are being carried out by Jaamat and its accomplices day in and day out. Hathajari in Chittagong Kaligunj in Satkhira, Chirir Bandar in Kurigram do remain the best instances of these in recent times. Since the Hindu minority community remains destitute all the time, silent migration remains the only option to them.

Why is an inhuman reduction taking place in this manner? Total fertility rate of Hindus is less, this has been stated tirelessly yet no such fact has been found from the concerned department. Nevertheless, several villages of Barisal, Bhola and Gopalgunj confirm that migration has been a major issue behind the diminishing population of Hindus. Some people state that migration has become common for Hindus following the partition in 1947. A few people charge that the Enemy Property Act has been a major issue to compel Hindus to desert their homeland. Some consider that Hindus remain in lots of troubles regarding election; on the other hand, they face reprisals whenever communal flare-ups are there in India.

Dr. Anisujjaman states that Hindus are devoid of the power to offer a stiff resistance to toughs and persecutors. According to this emeritus professor of Dhaka University, lack of security among minority group is a reality. A few people are also carrying out atrocities to grab minority properties. He said that a few parties or political leaders pledge to better conditions of minority communities. But these are never implemented in local circles and workers to do all these remain unavailable also. A few Hindu families of Gaurnadi and Agailjhara sub-districts in the district of Barisal, owing to threat of persecution day in ad day out, left the area in 2001.

From Dhandoba village it was learnt that Manoj Vaidya along with his wife had left the area within the next three days of election in 2001 and they have not returned yet. Saiful Islam, neighbor of Manoj, said to Prothom Alo that activists of BNP plundered Hindu and Christian residences in that area in the next day of election. They took away cow from Manoj's residence and before leaving, they also pillaged the plant of betel-leaves. Families of Kalipada Dafadar, Subal Dafadar, Mantu Dafadar, Jaideb Nandi had also deserted the country in 2001 due to post-election terrorism. Aditya Nag and Subal Dey, inhabitants of village sutarbari, left the country along with their families, for the same reason.

Krishnakanta Dey, chairman of No. 3 Chandsi Union, said to Prothom Alo, his own family members, let alone property, had been the targets of Islamists repeatedly but no member of this union left Bangladesh and moved to India. but several members of these families do not live in Bangladesh any more and if there are five brothers in a family, two of them prefer to live outside. Kjal debnath, member of Hindu-Buddhist-Christian Council said to Prothom Alo, to save girls parents are making them opt for early marriage or are sending them to India for safety. They are reading in Indian schools or colleges. But he also thinks that the migration is on the wane. Minority people, even if they fail to count on government completely, are hopeful that the government's approach regarding vested property would be beneficial to them and they will get back their ancestral properties. Hindus, these days, are found to purchase flats in large towns.

Situation in Bhola: BBS statistics states, 72, 275 Hindus were in the district in 2001 but the last census states that it has come down to 61, 162. Six families used to live in the residence of Sadhu Singh inhabiting the village of Nalgoda under Charpata Union of sub-district: Daulatkhan, district: Bhola. The entire family was headed by Laxmi Narayan Singh. But he sold the entire property after 1992 and as per locals in the village, Hindus started to migrate following 1992. Hindu families became victims of terrorism following the destruction of Babri mosque.

After the parliamentary election of 2001, lots of Hindu families went away. Locals confirm that more than 200 Hindu families including 4 of Sutarbari, 10 of Daktarbari, 6 of Majher Singhbari, 7 of the house of Ras Kamal Haoladar, 3 of Laxmikanta Haoladar, 7 of house of Tirthabas Haoladar, 7 of Paresh Haoladar's residence, 3 of Tepibari, all families of Sutarbari deserted the area. Three villages of the sub-district like Nalgora, Lejpata and Chargumani are dominated by Hindus. More than four hundred Hindu houses were in the area and hundreds of families of 172 residences have left. More than a thousand Hindu families were in the village of Mullaipattal in Tabgi Union under the sub-district of Borhanuddin. Now, 44 Hindu families are in the area.

Four villages in Lord Hardinge Union under the sub-district of Lalmohan were dominated by Hindus till 1991. 4, 600 Hindus votes were in the area up to 1991. At the moment, 44 Hindu families are in the area. Jatramani Laskar living in the village of Annadaprasad under the Union, states, owing to destruction of Babri Masjid in 1992 and terrorism following election in 2001, the majority of Hindu families abandoned their villages. As per information provided by local Union Healthcenter, 600 Hindu voters are in the Union these days.

Gopalgunj: The entire district is dominated by Awami League and it is widely believed that an amiable relation exists between this party and minority communities. The number of communal clashes in the area following independence is negligible. But Hindus are going away from the area steadily. The area comprised 3, 71, 629 Hindus in 2001 but after 10 years, it has come down to 3, 53, 794. A veteran journalist (on condition of anonymity) said to Prothom Alo, “enemy property” act has been harassing Hindus for the last 50 years almost and the next onslaught on Hindus happens to be the proclamation of Islam as the state religion. Awami League has failed to keep its promises, in this regard.

Chairman of a Union Council states, even if they are suitable in every sense of the term, minorities are never made president or general secretary in Awami League. They can go up to the position of (AGS) additional general secretary even in the senate of Bangabandhu College, directed by the government. Leaders of national parties are found to capture minority properties in the city of Choto Gopalgunj. These are enough to scare Hindus. When asked of situation in Gopalgunj, Kajal Debnath terms it as darkness under a lamp. No approach to prevent Hindus from migrating was perceived anywhere, even if lots of investigations had been made. A chairman of Gopalgunj district (on condition of anonymity) states, “I can help them to sell off their properties but I can’t request them to stay.”

Hindu-Buddhist-Christian Council, Puja Udjapan Parishad conduct seminars and meetings often and ask minority people there to shun the thought of deserting homeland. As per Kajal, these seminars do work really.

Reactions to Minority Persecution in Bangladesh across the globe :

- i. The surge in violence and minority persecution across Bangladesh owing to International War Criminal Tribunal is both distressing and painful – Dan W Mozena, US Ambassador in Bangladesh.
- ii. Developments in minority persecution led by Jamaat- Islami due to International War Crime Tribunal are completely unexpected – Babatunde Sotaimahn, Executive Director of Population Fund in United Nations. He commented on this in his Dhaka tour on March 11. :- Dainik Janakantha, March 12, 2013, Dhaka.
- iii. Enemies of independence have virtually declared a war against the nation and terrorists are their main basis. They have ravaged the basis of minority religious communities in the country and through their recurrent destruction of temples, governmental institutions, courts along with business establishments, the whole country is in a jeopardy. This is nothing but a grave bloodshed in the heart of Bangladesh. There is no need of any new law to prohibit radical Jamaat. Only the decision and order of the government is enough – Dr. Mizanur Rahman, Chairman – Bangladesh Human Rights Commission: - Dainik Janakantha, March 10, 2013, Dhaka.
- iv. Canada has expressed deepest concern down to recent violence in Dhaka and its neighborhood. Moreover, it is highly concerned on the spate of violent persecution on minority communities – John Beyard, Minister of External Affairs of Canada.
- v. Violent assaults on Hindu temples and Buddhist Vihars across Bangladesh have insulted thousand – year-old culture of Bengalis – Dilip Barua, Minister of Industries – Democratic Republic of Bangladesh.
- vi. The way Jamaat brigade has attacked minority communities, set their houses to fire has no relation to any democratic protest – Dr. Mahiuddin Khan Alamgir, Minister of Home Affairs, Dainik Janakantha, March 10, 2013., Dhaka.
- vii. Those people who are culpable for minority persecution are enemies of Islam – Hussain Mohammad Ershad – Chairman, Bangladesh Jatiya Party; Dainik Janakantha, March 9, 2013, Dhaka.
- viii. We are deeply worried of ongoing violence, minority persecution and rising deaths in the realm of Bangladesh – Patrick Dentre, Deputy Spokesperson, Minister of External Affairs, United States; Dainik Janakantha, March 6, 2013, Dhaka.
- ix. Minority people are completely helpless and are living in extreme terror. We do share the same specter of terror also. Now, it is the duty of people influenced by the notion of Muktiyuddha to stand beside them – Obaidul Kader, Minister of Communications – Democratic Republic of Bangladesh; Dainik Sambad – March 3, 2013, Dhaka.
- x. We do protest against the bids to destroy religious institutions and private properties – Robert Gibson, High Commissioner of British High Commission in Dhaka – Dainik Janakantha, March 2013, Dhaka.
- xi. Madrasa is a breeding center of terrorists – Shahidul Islam, Minister of Law, Democratic Republic of Bangladesh.

- 31) On December 18, 2013, in the dead of night, cadres of Jamaat and with lethal weapons attacked Karta family, minority Hindu family inhabiting Sukchar union council within the sub-district of Hatia in the district of Netrokona. Assailants entered through breaking the main gate and within the next few minutes, ransacked and also burnt down the house and adjoining temple.

- 32) On December 24, 2013, at 7 pm, Haran Chandra pal, minority Hindu individual, inhabiting the village of Jhaudanga within the sub-district headquarter in the district of Satkhira, became victim to an armed attack of Jamaat cadres. While he was returning from nearby market, assailants fired on him. He was admitted to the district hospital in a highly critical condition.
- 33) On December 24, 2013, at 11 pm, Jamaat cadres (with lethal weapons) carried out a daring attack on the house of Sadhan Pramanik, minority Hindu individual living in the village of Jagannathpur in the sub-district of Damurhuda in the district of Chuadanga. Attackers, through hurling three bombs, created a reign of terror in the area and also chanted slogan – “Hindu Jodi Banchte Chao, Bharote Choila Jao” or if Hindus want to live, they must go to India. Locals consider, the entire ploy of Islamists was to evict Sadhan from his own property first and banish him from Bangladesh ultimately.
- 34) Diptirani Ray became widow within 6 months of her marriage. Her husband Siddartha Ray (age 30) lost his life owing to wild attacks of armed Jamaat cadres. Siddartha, a minority Hindu individual, was a police official and was deputed in Rajshahi where he died in harness following attacks of armed cadres of Jamaat. On December 20, He was admitted to hospital and in a highly critical condition. - 35) On December 22, 2013, in the evening, Samya Bepari (a child of 2 years and 3 months of age), son of Mrs. Mallika Bepari, minority Hindu individual living in the village of Nayakandi within the jurisdiction of Kalkini police station in the district of Madaripur, was kidnapped and virtually chopped by a few Islamists. Such a outcome was not unimaginable and it can be said from a single fact – for the last 6 months a few miscreants had been warning her (in her mobile phone) of dire consequences if he did not move to India forsaking property in Bangladesh. Mr. Satyen Bepari, husband of Mallika, died two years back on account of illness. She was the only heir to the entire property and hence, she was targeted by local Islamists. Mallika remained steadfast albeit unidentified calls asked her to sell the property at a throwaway price; she was also being warned regularly through phones. Locals fee, abduction and brutal murder of her only son is the fallout this tussle. An official complaint was filed in the local police station – case no. 15/23/12/2013. Police has not been able to arrest anyone yet. Hindus are terrified.
